

NutriGardens Confirms Natural BeetBoost Used by Team USA Swimmer Who Won Medal at Rio 2016

The NutriGardens brand has announced that its 100% natural BeetBoost superfood was taken by a Team USA swimmer who powered his way to the podium at the Rio 2016 Olympic Games.

OREGON — NutriGardens, a leading American clean food concentrate brand, has confirmed that its revolutionary 100% natural chef-made BeetBoost nutritional product was part of a health regime incorporated by a United States Olympic Team swimmer who won a silver medal at the Rio 2016 Summer Olympics.

BeetBoost is the world's first beet and tart cherry juice powder blend specifically developed to aid peak performance and recovery. As well as an Olympic medalist, the NutriGardens brand is trusted by professional National Football League (NFL), National Basketball Association (NBA), and Major League Baseball (MLB) players as well as top sports teams, universities, professional triathletes, accomplished marathon runners, and renowned obstacle course racers.

“It's an honor when a completely pure, natural, additive-free and super-concentrated nutritional product is used by a sporting hero who has made history while representing their country,” asserted, Rick Perry, the Founder of NutriGardens and a Le Cordon Bleu Chef, an Author, and a Cyclist. “Backed by research, BeetBoost has been proven to be a world-leader in boosting stamina and accelerating recovery in athletes and individuals in several countries.”

Overall, the non-stimulant athlete-centric portable, convenient single serving packet is now a growing part of the regime of athletes at the top of their game and peak of their international careers in 10 countries around the world. From its headquarters in Portland, Oregon, NutriGardens' BeetBoost combines Nitric Oxide (NO) performance with a superior tasting product. Using a patented process, it delivers results across 4 vital areas to improve energy, reduce fatigue, assist with mental clarity, and promote even faster recovery times.
